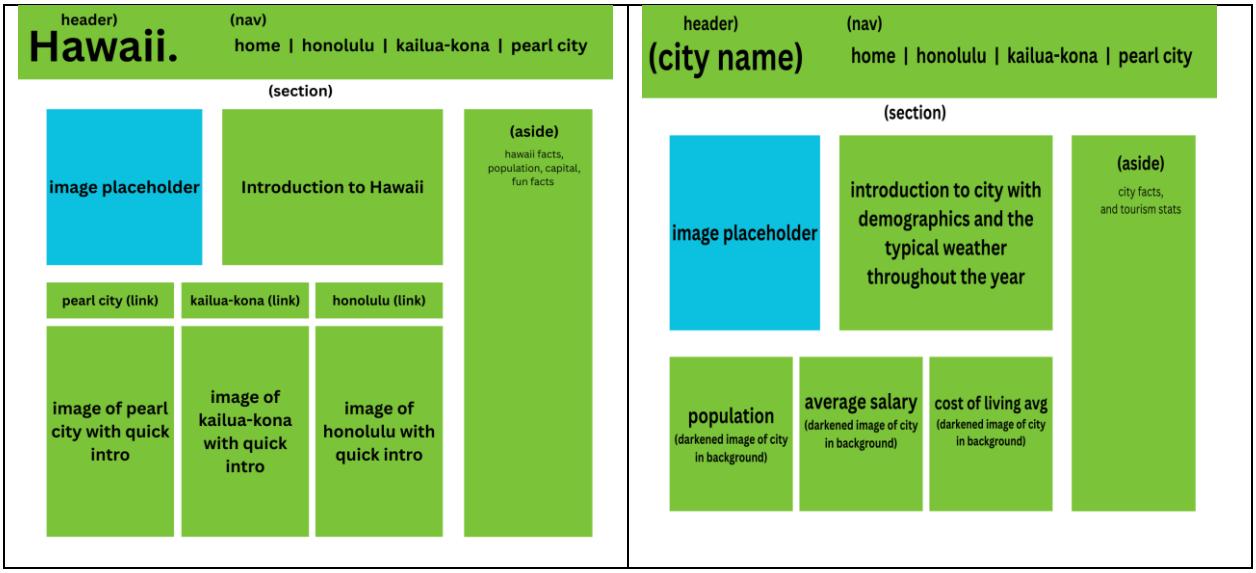
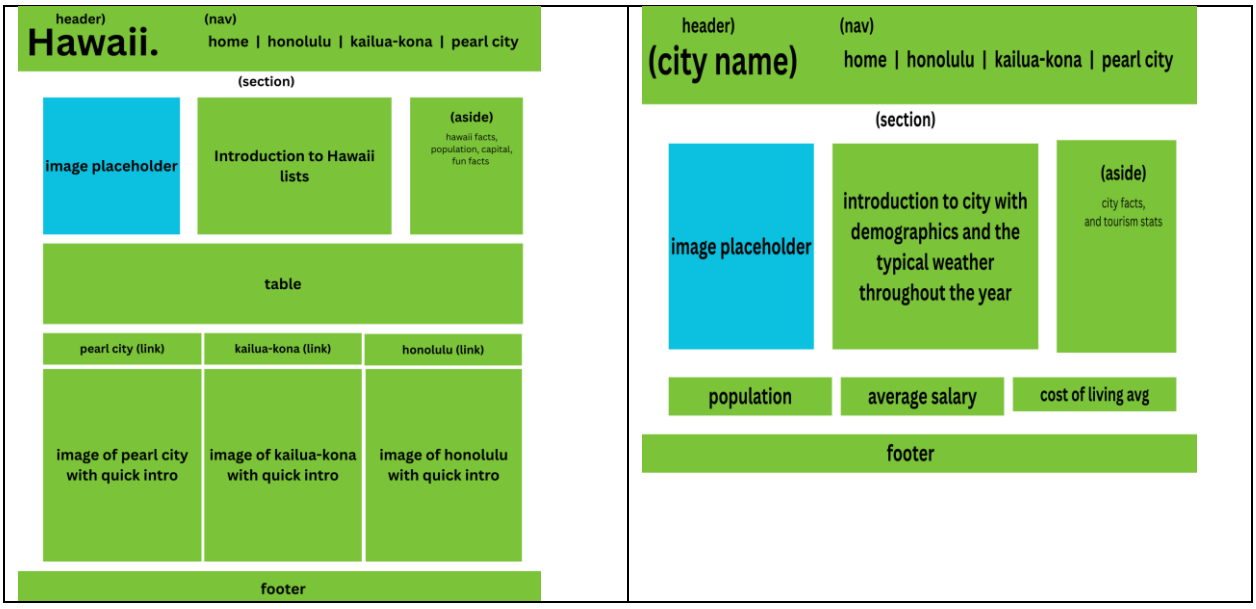
D277 – Front-End Web Development Final Wireframes

Task 1: Wireframes



Task 2: Finished Product Wireframes



Changes I Made:

Throughout coding the final product of my website, I realized that I would have to revise my wireframes from Task 1. One big change I made was the size of the 'aside'. In the beginning I thought that I was going to need a bigger section to fit all the facts and information I wanted, but during the implementation process, I realized that I would need to shrink the size a significant amount. Another change I made was adding a footer to all of the pages, this just brought the whole site together in my opinion. I stuck to the 'tiles' idea on all the pages but I made some revisions such as not adding an image background to the home screen, due to the complexion of the idea, and I shrunk the fact tiles on the city pages. In the end, I think I did a great job of structuring my final product to match the wireframes I created in the design phase.
